Help for distressed home owners.

It is a tough time for all these days. None more so then in the field of selling homes. More and more these days, I am across the kitchen table from someone who is distressed about their home. They are underwater, or can not afford the payments.

There are many reasons for being in distress. Loss of income, reduction of income, interest rate resetting, loss of home value, and of course divorce. Whatever the reason, it is our job to consult with home owners, to ask questions, offer options and to help make a plan of action.

Sometime the decision is a loan modification; other options are Short sale, foreclosure, or just staying put.

In a short 20 minute phone conversation we can often make the call as to whether a short sale is an option, and we assess the likelihood that a short sale will be successful.

If we decide to use the short sale route, then we will have an 80% success rate of closing, (compared to a national average of around 30%)

So if you or someone dear to you is in an uncomfortable situation with the home, get in touch with us. Read more at <http://www.ShortSalesMadison.com>.
